JOANNE FLUKE'S LAKE EDEN COOKBOOK 317
BROWN SUGAR DROPS

Hannah's Note: The original name of this recipe was "Browned" Sugar Drops. Over the years, it got shortened to Brown Sugar Drops, even though there's no brown sugar in the recipe.

To make this candy, you will need a candy thermometer. I use the kind with a glass tube and a sliding metal clamp that attaches to the side of a saucepan. And even though the recipe calls for a 3-quart saucepan, I always use my 4-quart saucepan. That way I don't have to worry about the candy foaming up over the sides.

1 cup buttermilk
2 and 1/2 cups white (granulated) sugar
1 teaspoon baking soda
2 Tablespoons (1/4 cup) white Karo syrup
1/2 cup butter, room temperature (1 stick, 4 ounces,
1/2 pound)

Before you start, get out a 3-quart saucepan (or a 4-quart saucepan) and your candy thermometer. Place the thermometer inside the saucepan with the sliding clamp on the outside. Slide the thermometer through the clamp until it's approximately 1/2 inch from the bottom of the pan. If the bulb touches the bottom of the pan, your reading will be wildly off!

On a cold burner, combine the buttermilk, sugar, baking soda, and white Karo syrup in the saucepan. Stir the mixture until it's smooth.
